security constraints for rest controller are insufficient

19.04.2018 11:38 - Miroslav Blaško

Target version:		Spent time:	5.50 hours
Description
Please revise rest controllers security restrictions. E.g. it is possible to retrieve all patients by REST API if institution is absent in REST API call. Currently fixed by workaround at PatientRecordController:
<pre>@PreAuthorize("hasRole(' + SecurityConstants.ROLE_ADMIN + "') OR (institutionKey != null)") public List<PatientRecordDto> getRecords(@RequestParam(value = "institution", required = false) String institutionKey) { ... }</pre>
- java tests of rest-controllers security should be added to confirm that it works correctly

I have problems with configuration needed for controllers testing.
Could you configure it and make example test please?

- going over the code, I realized that in our setting it makes more sense to put security constraints on services instead of controllers (we can discuss on next meeting)

- I updated branch java-tests2 with correct setting for controllers

=> I suggest testing controllers with this setting + don't test security related issues within controllers

- Before that, I have also created branch java-controllers-test-alternative, which was meant to be used for security testing. I suggest to leave it until next meeting, so I can demonstrate how to make tests for the service layer. After the meeting, I suppose it will be deleted...
